 Tokenization: Split the text into sentences, Sentences into words, Lowercase the words, remove punctuation.

 Words that have fewer than 3 characters are removed.

 stopwords are removed.

 lemmatization—words in third person are changed to first person and verbs in past and future tenses are changed into present.

 Stemming—words are reduced to their root form.

Word Cloud Visualization

Google says a word cloud is “an image composed of words used in a particular text or subject, in which the size of each word indicates its frequency or importance.” So, the more often a specific words appears in your text, the bigger and bolder it appears in your word cloud.

%matplotlib inline

Tokenization

Tokenization is the process of dividing text into a set of meaningful pieces. These pieces are called tokens. For example, we can divide a chunk of text into words, or we can divide it into sentences

In [103]: corpus = [] import gensim
from nltk.tokenize import word_tokenize

for text in training['statement']:
    corpus.append(text)

Below if the corpus of all tokens inside the statement column

TFidf Vectorization

Tf-idf stands for term frequency-inverse document frequency. This weight is a statistical measure used to evaluate how important a word is to a document in a collection or corpus. Convert a collection of raw documents to a matrix of TF-IDF features. Equivalent to CountVectorizer followed by TfidfTransformer.

$TF(t) = (\text{Number of times term } t \text{ appears in a document}) / (\text{Total number of terms in the document}).$

 Topic modeling is a type of statistical modeling for discovering the abstract “topics” that occur in a collection of documents. Latent Dirichlet Allocation (LDA) is an example of topic model and is used to classify text in a document to a particular topic. It builds a topic per document model and words per topic model, modeled as Dirichlet distributions.

I would be applying LDA to a set of news headlines and split them into topics.

Bag of Words

Bag of words model is one of a series of techniques from a field of computer science known as Natural Language Processing or NLP to extract features from text. The way it does this is by counting the frequency of words in a document. A document can be defined as you need, it can be a single sentence or all Wikipedia. The output of the bag of words model is a frequency vector.

The first step in this model is defining the vocabulary The second step is to use the vocabulary vector to convert sentences into a frequency vector based on the vocabulary.

This model extracts features from text in the form of frequency counts. The resulting vectors can be utilized in various machine learning algorithms be it to classify documents into topics
